Specialist Fought Makes Drastic Recommendations After Survey of System

CONSOLIDATION BEST

Canadian Married Men Should be Subsidized by Govt. for Teachers

REGINA, Sask., March 15.—From the provincial department of education there was issued today an official summary of the findings and recommendations by Dr. H. W. Fought, the famous specialist in rural school practice, who was engaged by the provincial government to conduct a com-cial government to conduct a complete survey of the educational system of Saskatchewan. The services of Dr. Focht were obtained by the government with the desire of obtaining a wholly unbiased statement of educational systems in the province and is probably the first instance on record of a government extending an invitation to a citizen in the employ of another country to direct the study of its schools system.

The official summary indicates the recommendations made by Dr. Focht under various headings. In the matter of school organization and administration, the survey recommends the disestablishment of all school districts as now organized (other than organized village and town districts) and the re-establishment instead of all schools lying wholly or in part within each rural municipality as one single municipal school district. An organization of one municipal board of education, together with custodians for each school in the municipality is advocated, instead of the pres-

The survey also makes recommendations as to professional supervision, suggests the most rigid enforcement of the attendance laws, and special pro-

In connection with the schools in the non-English communities, the survey recommends that young men and women, English-speaking, of Ruthenian and Canadian origin, of good native ability and missionary zeal, be chosen on the nomination of the inspector and trained in the normal schools at provincial expense on

That specially prepared Canadian teachers, preferably married men, with practical wives, be subsidized by the government to teach in the schools.

That model community schools be organized with government aid;

That steps be taken to place all private schools under competent gov-

The authorization to use public schools for the teaching of a non-English language only after the regular school hours.

Important recommendations are also made as to school support, including the suggestion that all agricultural and grazing lands (not otherwise exempted) not now included in the organized school districts, be, under law, entered for taxation for educational purposes.

$8000 Campaign Of The Bulletin

Now on Last Lap

The few weeks remaining of the campaign will be crowded full of effort, of changes, of rallying final support and tremendous vote activity.

Only those who keep pegging away, doing something every day and never overlooking an opportunity to get subscriptions will win the big prizes. Be one of those candidates. Appeal to your friends for support on the to your friends for support on the ground that the campaign has reached a crucial stage. Take advantage of "the second payment" plan—read that part which pertains to this below.

Organize, systematize, go over your list of subscribers. Get those who have given you short term subscriptions to extend them. That is the way the most successful candidates will conduct their campaign. They will consider these suggestions. They will plan out their day's itinerary the night before and list the names and addresses of those upon whom they intend to call.

With the big prizes so near, the

It will impel the ambitious candidates to put forth greater efforts than ever. Why shouldn't a man or woman who has before him or her, for the next few weeks' effort, a $2000 prize or one of two $1200 prizes, put forth the most strenuous effort to attain that prize?

Second Payments

ment would amount to if paid at one time which would be 7000 votes, the amount you would receive for the second payment, making a total vote on account of the second payment of 10,000 votes.

Remember, this applies to any second payment you may receive, whether six months, one year, or five years. In order to get credit for the second payment, you must write across the top of the receipt stub which you

The top of the receipt says which you send to the contest department "Second Payment," also giving the amount of the first payment.

One well known oil company, with agencies and refineries throughout the continent, maintains that America is now suffering from an oversupply of gasoline and that is far as Edmonton is concerned. Friday alone witnessed an oversupply of two entire tank cars of gasoline, totalling several thousands of gallons, whose arrival could not be offset by purchases for some time. The oversupply, it was contended, would only be partially offset by Another concern, even greater in prominence than the first, contended that a gasoline shortage was imminent and that a situation almost serious in its effects would take place when an active demand was received from those using gasoline tractors and gasoline engines for farm work. Consumption was exceeding production at the present time.

The Edmonton Bulletin Map

Of the Battle Front in France

SECTION FOUR.

SECTION FOUR.

The Bulletin presents to its readers today the final section of a remarkably accurate map of the Battle Front in France. The other sections have appeared in the last three Saturday issues of The Bulletin. It gives an accurate representation of the western front. The map covers the entire battle line from the North Sea to the Swiss border. Everybody will find a map to follow the movements of the allied forces. Money cannot buy one better than that given FREE to readers of The Bulletin.

Directions:

If a wall map is desired follow these instructions: Section 1—Do not trim. Section 2—Cut off upper margin on a straight line, close to the edge of the map, being careful not to mutilate the map. Section 3—Cut off the upper margin, also the margin to the left. Section 4—Cut off the margin. Then fit the sections together and fasten with paste applied to unprinted margins. Before pasting be sure that the various lines on the map match evenly. The map is accurate and the sections when joined will fit exactly.

LIQUOR ACT ENFORCEMENT

Editor The Bulletin.

An article appeared in an evening paper tonight in which Mr. Coon is reported to have said that the Liquor Act is being very poorly enforced. For the benefit of the public I want to give you some figures of the working of this force as compared with the results of the Liquor Act. Provincial Police between Jan. 1, 1917 and Dec. 31, 1917, saw a period of nine months.

Up to this time the feeding of hogs in the city has been prohibited in the interest of public health, which seems to be proper, but now we are asked to go ahead and raise hogs in our back yards.

There is much to criticize in such suggestions.

It does not seem as if it would pay to feed such hogs. The hogs would even from 10 families is slight and should be discontinued. Feed would have to be bought for the hogs and many of the resulting animals would be poor looking creatures.

Again it is far better to eat the grain ourselves first than to eat it as feed for hogs. The hogs would even from 10 families is slight and should be discontinued. Feed would have to be bought for the hogs and many of the resulting animals would be poor looking creatures.

number of things," Mary rejoined coldly, "except a gentleman!"

This time the low whistle grew audible, and Mary stopped short.

"I can go the rest of the way alone," she said.

"I'll take you to the subway station," Freddy murmured huskily.

"Thank you, no, Mr. Furnival!" Mary replied.

As she passed on, Freddy raised his hat with as good a flourish and bow as Ginhoulac himself might have made. He watched her till she disappeared down the subway stairs; and once again his lips shaped themselves to a whistle as he strode rapidly away.

ON A Wednesday morning, three weeks later, Oakley walked into the outer office of Furnival's suite, which he found entirely unguarded by office boy or stenographer, and passed without hindrance to Freddy's room. As he entered, the young lawyer hastily thrust something into his waistcoat pocket and rose to greet his friend with rather forced cordiality.

"Congratulations, old chap!" Freddy cried. "I heard it this morning."

"It isn't generally known yet," said Oakley.

"Good news travels fast, you know," Freddy rejoined. "I had the pleasure of meeting Ginhoulac some weeks ago. He is a splendid fellow!"

"Indeed he is," Oakley agreed.

"His people are great shakes in Italy. His father's a privy counselor."

"You don't say!" Freddy commented, a trifle incredulous.

"He's quite an athlete, too," Oakley went on admiringly.

"So Taylor was telling me," Freddy broke in.

"He kicked Taylor down Mott street for a block and a half."

"There surely must have been some provocation,"

"There was. Taylor smoked six of his cigars."

"Six cigars oughtn't to disturb him like that," said Oakley. "He's the soul of generosity. Why, the ring he gave Mary is absolutely priceless. It's an heirloom in his family—a large ruby set with four brilliants. Perfectly stunning thing—you ought to see it!"

"I have seen it."

"What?" Oakley cried. "Impossible! He only gave it to Mary yesterday afternoon."

"As a matter of fact," Freddy went on calmly, "I believe I have it in my waistcoat pocket right now."

"What on earth are you talking about?"

For answer, Freddy took the ring from his waistcoat pocket and tossed it upon the desk blotter.

"Large ruby and four diamonds," he said, "according to plans and specifications."

Oakley lay back in his chair and gaped like a landed trout.

"Perhaps," he said at length, "you'll be good enough to explain this—this—"

He concluded the question with an eloquent gesture.

"By all means," Freddy replied. "This morning, when I came in, I found Taylor tossing a small object in the air and catching it again, with such rapidity that it looked like a lot of colored balls issuing from a Roman candle. As soon as he saw me he pocketed it. My curiosity being aroused, I proceeded to knuckle him."

"Knuckle him?"

"Precisely," Freddy went on. "A schoolboy trick. Hurts like thunder. Old Torquemada knew his business, Oakley, for it wasn't five minutes before I had it out of my worthy young friend, and there you see it."

"How did Taylor get hold of it?" asked Oakley.

"More knuckling made him tell," said Freddy. "He confessed that last night he attended the Benvenuto Cellini Circle, having made his peace with Ginhoulac. Of course, he noticed Mary wearing the ring, and when she went into the ante-room to wash her hands, and returned without it, he concluded that she must have left it on the lavatory. That's precisely what she had done, as he found out immediately—and there you are. Lucky I came in just when I did, or in all probability it would have disappeared entirely before this."

"And where is Taylor now?"

"I've fired him," said Freddy. "I've meant to do it every day for the past three weeks, but I've always forgotten about it until today."

"Confound it, sir, you're behaving like a fool!"

"Why on earth didn't you have him arrested?"

"What's the use?" Freddy yawned.

"We have the ring, and now let us go and take it back to Mary."

THE Oakleys dwelt in an English basement residence in West End avenue. One glance at the white-leaded fanlight of the colonial front door and the curtailed elegance of the upper windows established the Oakley respectability as firmly as did the family Bible and the "Social Register" beneath the big mahogany table in the library. It was to this chamber that Freddy had been ushered by Oakley on their arrival.

"Light up while I go and find Mary," he said, and started for the door.

Hardly had he reached it, however, when from the lower floor came a cry, half of rage, half of hysteria, which at once halted Oakley and brought Freddy to his feet.

"Now, what in the world is that?" Oakley ejaculated.

Another wall arose, and then followed the words:

"You lost eat, you lost eat!"

"Ginhoulac!" Freddy whispered.

"He's got 'em bad!"

"Ah, no, no, no, no!" re-echoed through the house.

"By George, he has Duse and Bernhardt simply skinned to death!" Freddy chuckled.

"Give me the ring, Freddy," Oakley said. "I think I'll go downstairs and kick him out."

Mingled with Mary's soothing contralto and Ginhoulac's shrill hysteria came an expostulatory growl.

"Confound it, sir, you're behaving like a fool!" it said.

"The governor!" Oakley exclaimed.

"When I was a kid he always said 'Confound it, sir,' just before he whaled the life out of me. Exertion's bad for him, too. I guess I'll go down."

He took the stairs four at a jump, while Freddy went back to the library and closed the door behind him. For ten minutes the muffled sound of voices came in faint waves from the ground floor, until a decisive bang of the front door brought the conference to a close.

Freddy had been standing by the library window, gazing idly into the street, and he saw Ginhoulac leave the house. For one brief moment the enraged Italian stood muttering on the curb. Between his thumb and finger he held the ring,

"I guess it must have gone down a sewer opening," said Freddy.

"Or into the pockets of one of the searchers," Oakley corrected. "In any event, it's gone."

"Amen," Freddy murmured piously, "I'm going home to clean up."

Oakley shook him warmly by the hand.

"We're all very much obliged to you," he said. "I hope you'll come around again this evening."

NOT only on that evening but on many succeeding evenings Freddy called at the Oakley residence, until, six months later, Mary was ready to wear another ring.

"No heirlooms for mine!" said Freddy as he took the measure of her third finger with a piece of string. "It shall be the conventional solitaire, and the bluest-whitest or the whitest-bluest in Maiden Lane!"

Accordingly, bright and early the next morning Freddy jumped off a Broadway car at the corner of Maiden Lane and caromed from a policeman to a stunted newsboy, who was vigorously shouting the latest afternoon edition of an evening paper. He steadied himself by seizing the youngster's shoulder.

"Easy there, my boy!" he cried, and then he recognized the youth. "As I live," he shouted, "it's Tagliatella. Greetings, Taylor!"

The embarrassed Tagliatella wriggled and struggled to free himself, but Freddy held him close.

"Come on to the sidewalk," he said. "I'm not going to harm you."

He drew his reluctant captive to a shop window and proceeded to interrogate him.

"Do you ever go to the Tasso Settlement these days?"

"Naw!" Taylor replied. "It's blown up since Ginhoulac beat it."

"Beat it?"

"Sure," Taylor continued. "He went back to do old country."

"You don't say!" said Freddy. "You must have been sorry to lose your old friend."

"Old friend narten!" Taylor cried. "He was a cheap skate."

"There's gratitude for you!" Freddy exclaimed. "You smoke Mr. Ginhoulac's cigars and wear his heirloom ruby and diamond ring, and yet you call him a cheap skate!"

Taylor grinned broadly.

"Quit yer kiddin'," he said. "Dem seegars wuz de rankest kind of flor de smellerinos."

"But surely the ring—"

"A lemon!" Taylor jeered. "I couldn't get two bones on it. When you hooked it from me I wuz goin' to give it back to Miss Oakley."

A great light broke over Freddy Furnival.

"You don't mean to say that that ruby and those four flashing diamonds were paste?" he cried.

"Dey wuz narten but winder glass," Taylor replied. "I got it straight from de fence, Mr. Furnival."

"And so you were going to give it back when I took it from you?"

"I suddenly wuz," said Taylor. "I ain't no petty larceny guy, you betcher life!"

"Then, my young friend, I did you a great injustice," Freddy declared, with mock seriousness, and tendered the lad a quarter.

"Dat's all right," Taylor replied, pocketing the salving coin. "De best of us is liable to make a mistake wunst in a while."

Freddy Furnival acquiesced in the sentiment with a solemn nod.

which glittered and flashed in the afternoon sunlight; then, raising his hand above his head, he flung it far into the roadway.

As Freddy turned from the window, Oakley entered.

"Sorry to have kept you waiting," he said, "but we've had the dickens of a row downstairs."

"Only a lovers' quarrel, I hope?" Freddy suggested.

"A very violent one," Oakley replied.

"The fact is, when Mary said she didn't think his ring was valuable enough to make all that fuss about, Ginhoulac grew rabid, and actually swore at her. He apologized immediately, and said he thought she was calling his priceless old heirloom a valueless gift. After that, of course, Mary refused to have anything more to do with him, and when I gave her the ring she insisted on his taking the precious thing."

"Was he glad to get it back?" Freddy asked.

"He must have been," Oakley replied. "The governor says that when he heard it was lost he acted like a man scared out of his wits. Apparently he valued it very highly."

"Nevertheless, I don't think he did," Freddy rejoined.

"How do you know?" said Oakley.

"Because I was standing by the window as he went out, and I saw him throw the ring into the street."

"Impossible!" Oakley ejaculated.

AFEW minutes later the two young men, aided by the servants and half the small boys of the neighborhood, were poking in the dust of West End avenue for the discarded bauble. They searched without avail, however, until dusk.
